Music event scheduled to answer 28 year question, “Where is Mundo Earwood?”

HUMBLE, TEX. -- Mundo Earwood is an iconic name in the country music industry, touting 24 instances on the Billboard charts from 1972 to 1982, and writing for such artists as Willie Nelson, Mel Tillis, Tammy Wynette and Bobby Vinton. Earwood’s name disappeared from the mainstream limelight shortly after the 1982 release of, “You’re in Love with the Wrong Man,” which peaked at #27 on Billboard, and many loyal fans and those who are now discovering Earwood’s music are raising the question, “Where is Mundo?”

A website found at www.whereismundo.com has posted details for an event featuring Mundo Earwood, which is scheduled for December 31, 2010, at 8:00 P.M., on the KOA Campgrounds on Lake Conroe, an area outside of Houston. The website lists several links to social media accounts for Earwood, as well as a short promotional video, showcasing music clips and photos.

Ross Phillips, a contact with the “Where is Mundo?” effort, is behind the website and its efforts to revive the name of this “unforgettable cowboy.”

“We have seen discussion on the Internet over the past few years, and fans are reaching out to connect with Mundo again,” Phillips said. “We are excited about the live event, and the ability for people outside the Houston area to be engaged, as well.”

The website’s embedded video player will deliver a live stream during the concert, which offers fans outside of the Houston area an opportunity to share in the excitement of the evening. The event is coordinated with the release of Earwood’s official website, which will be the country artist’s first foray into the digital realm.

Earwood is connected on popular social media sites, such as Facebook and Twitter, enabling fans to receive updates as the website launch comes closer. Become a fan of Mundo Earwood by visiting www.facebook.com/mundoearwood, and follow updates on Twitter via www.twitter.com/mundoearwood.
